

Captain's Log 091907

If you've managed to maintain your sanity and intellect, then give them hell. If you've somehow managed to retain your creativity and whatever shards of illusionary freedom, then fight for goodness sake. Do not surrender. Do not render yourself useless to this mindless drones that --

Captain's Log 082707

We've been stranded at sea for almost 250 days now with no end in sight for our torment. The crew is suffering from some sort of sickness to which I have effectively treated by walking the plank. In actuality, there is no plank and I've just been forcing them at gunpoint off the ship. Better safe then sorry. And if they bloody well think they are going to stage a mutiny then I swear I'll take down my beloved ship with me. In any case, I can hear the voices of dissent so the time is drawing near when I sink us all to the bottom of our beloved ocean.

Captain's Log 082907

To put an end to the blasphemous treachery bounded to be executed by my wayward crew, I made an example of their supposed leaders. I'm sure this will only invoke a much more power and emotional rebellion but they had better. I trained them to be better than to embark on a failure. Better get the job correctly and efficiently I say.

A.R.T.

2007

ss